Kony Unveiled: A Social Screening of Peace vs. Justice

May 16, 2012

From the [ITVS Beyond the Box Blog, posted 14 May 2012 03:11 PM PDT]

ITVS presents an online social screening of Klaartje Quirijns's Peace vs. Justice on Wednesday, May 16 at 5PM PT / 8PM ET. The event will take place here.

What do you really know about Joseph Kony? On Wednesday we will be hosting a live online screening and discussion of the documentary Peace vs. Justice, going beyond the slick marketing of KONY 2012 and taking an in-depth look at the rebel leaders responsible for the most egregious of human-rights abuses – kidnapping children and forcing them to fight.

Peace vs. Justice examines the International Criminal Court's investigation of the LRA and takes a critical look at the problems of applying Western ideas of justice and reconciliation to other countries and continents.

Join us for a social screening of Peace vs. Justice with filmmaker Klaartje Quirijns, who will be taking part in the screening to talk about the film and take your questions live.

Participants can join for free by signing in with Facebook or directly on the site, interacting with other viewers and panelists in real-time, while watching the film. Viewers can comment, ask questions, take polls, and even express their feelings about what they're watching through a variety of tools on the site. This is an entirely new way of experiencing documentary films and it is inherently social.
